Sick Fire Dispatcher

Sticks to Post; Faints

New York.—An unwritten rule in the fire department that a fireman in an emergency must stick till he drops, was literally observed by Fire Alarm Dispatcher William S. Riordan, "ablaze" with fever, who stuck to his key at the fire alarm telegraph bureau until he fell unconscious to the floor. This in spite of the fact that Fire Department Surgeon Dr. Harry M. Archer, several hours earlier, had found Riordan a very sick man and ordered him to bed.

The physician again cautioned him, but he was adamant. Doctor Archer had hardly left when the dispatcher received a flash of a fire. Riordan sent in a three-alarm signed at 1:18. Then he called Doctor Archer to take care of eight firemen of engine company No. 16 who were overcome by smoke at that fire.

The bill was defended by its author,

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mrs. Charles Lewis will give a bridge dinner Easter Monday for her daughter, Mrs. Emil Leidick, of Detroit, Michigan.

Mrs. W. Harry Crow has issued invitations to a birthday party for her daughter, Miss Jeane, Wednesday, March 31.

About twenty-five members of the Willing Workers class of the United Brethren church gave Mrs. George Smith, East Main street, a delightful surprise last Thursday evening at her home. A happy time was enjoyed by all in old-fashioned games, stunts, etc. Little Charles and Bobby Davis gave splendid recitations and many of the older folks developed unexpected talent also along that line.

At a late hour delicious refreshments of angel food cake, ice cream and coffee were served. All reported a wonderful time.

The beautiful country home of Mrs. Jane Pherson was the scene of a happy gathering Sunday where her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren came with well filled baskets to do honor to her seventy-sixth birthday anniversary. This was a joyful surprise to Mrs. Pherson, as the affair had been adroitly managed by her daughter, Mrs. Jennie Reeves. The house was prettily decorated with ferns and blooming plants, many of which came as remembrances. At the noon hour a delicious buffet lunch was heartily enjoyed by all. At the close of the afternoon, which was spent in games and conversation, the guests departed, after wishing Mrs. Pherson many more such happy birthday anniversaries. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Scott E. McPherson and children, Lloyd and Betty, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Ferguson and children, Jane and Bobby, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Myers, all of Bucyrus; Mr. and Mrs. W. Corsets Supplied for Every Figure

Combination Brassiere and Girdle Makes Its Bid for Approval

Corset styles are largely influenced by the demands of fashion, and since fashion is insisting upon curves in opposition to the straight silhouette of the last few years, corsetry is now of vital interest to every woman. The curved lines of necessity need more attention, observes a fashion authority in the New York Times, for this type of figure requires greater control than the straight silhouette. To meet this problem, and in fact to solve it, the combination brassiere and girdle has been introduced in new variations. There are also garter belts, little bandeaus, all-flexible step-ins lightly boned and boneless, as well as the closed back and clasp-front girdles and the new type of laced-back corset with self-reducing lines. Materials include knitted or woven silks and rayons, poplins and, for the large figure, brocades.

For the slim girl who prefers the separate brassiere there is a step-in girdle with a panel-back and front of brocaded material and wide elastic side sections. Double garters are the only other feature. Then there is the "Charleston" girdle made along the same lines and of the same material, but having the front panel equipped with an extra section which has two elastic straps that fasten to the lower edge of the girdle in back. This model is made without garters.

Another combination for the slender figure is made entirely of knitted rayon. It has very long lines and is reinforced with silk elastic gores at the sides. A narrow elastic strap across the back holds the brassiere in place. A long basque brassiere model has a hip confiner, and is made of knitted silk and heavy satin. The satin is used in the girdle part and the rayon for the brassiere top. The elastic side gores, two short bones in front, and an unusually long girdle help mold the figure along youthful lines.

Chubby figures have a style of combination all their own. Knitted or woven silks and meshes are used for these models, with, of course, the usual elastic gores at the hips. The girdle in these models is of the step-in variety, but the brassiere part hooks either in the back or at the sides, thereby assuring perfect fit. Elastic shoulder straps give greater resiliency to the figure.

For the medium-sized woman, or what is technically known as the "full average figure," there is a combination with the brassiere hooking at the side. Three short bones in front insure the flat appearance that is so desired across the abdomen. These combinations usually come in the heavier materials, which give greater control throughout.

Large-size figures have combinations in the step-in variety, too, and, in addition, an extra band underneath the girdle section to hold the diaphragm firmly in place and to confine the hips.

Hat of Brown Straw Is Liked by Young Matron

This smart hat for the young matron is of brown straw with a facing of satin. The fancy pom-pom on the side is of red gold. It is regarded as a chic chapeau for spring.

New Names for Colors for Spring Wearables

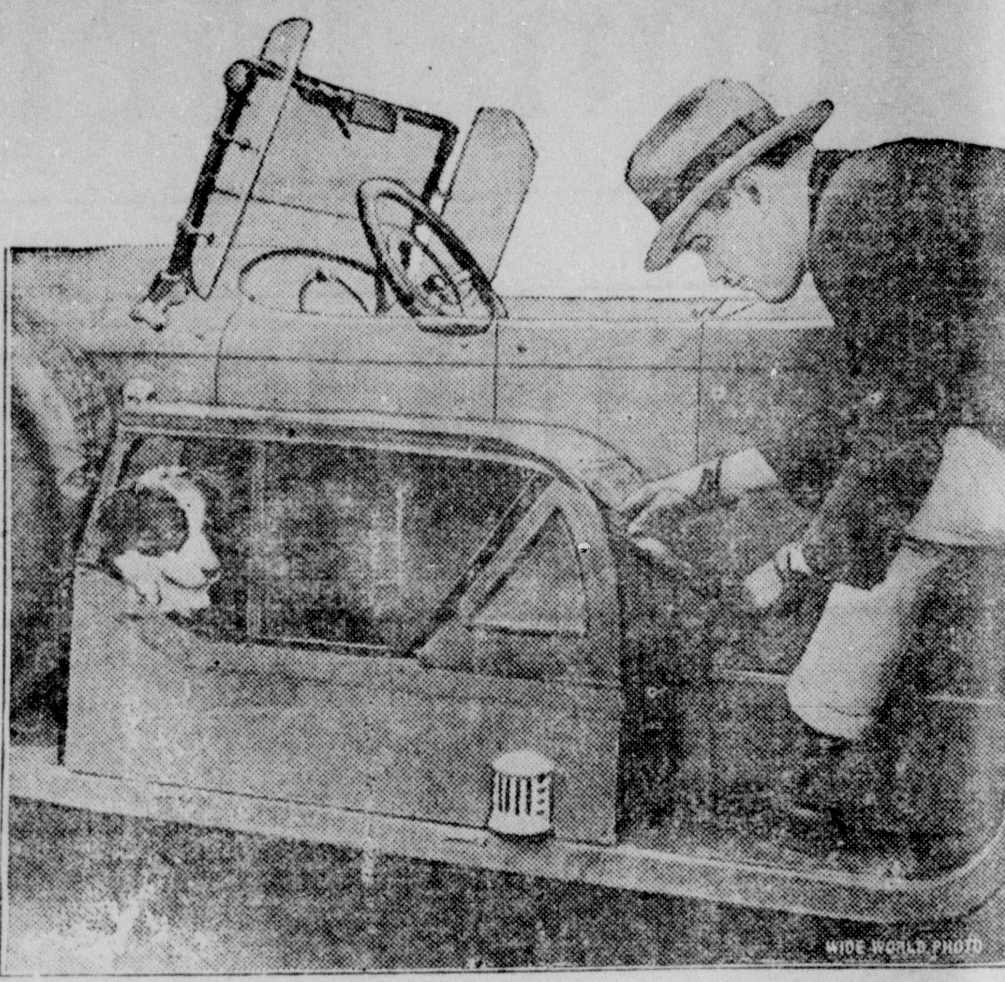

The same old pastel colors continue to dominate the field of fashion for spring, but most of them have new names. Among the red may be found tintoret, azalea, grape and corolla, but they are all allied with rose red. In the blue scale are renaisance, lavender, anemone and jangles. The greens include turquoise, meadow, cat-skill, alligator and citreune.

The yellow-orange ranges comprises champagne, apricot and melissande. Pay your money and take your choice.

Platinum Gray New Shade

Gold and silver have had their day and now are being forced to share fashion popularity with the other metals. One of the most popular shades for coats and dresses today is platinum gray, since gloves, shoes, stockings and hat of a matching shade may be worn with it. The reddish copper tones are being employed for coats in fawn and copper-tinted furs. Bronze is being taken up in similar fashion.

GOOD MANNERS IN MOTORING URGED

Connecticut Expert Outlines Code of Ethics for Use of Drivers.

Robbins B. Stoeckel, commissioner of motor vehicles of the state of Connecticut, has proposed the following code of ethics or good manners in motoring:

"To be a good driver, in the terms of applied ethics, is to be a person of good manners, truly an altruist, ready to see and appreciate the problems of others, to make proper allowance for them and to exercise even a little more patience, care and consideration than is actually called for by the letter of the law.

"Driving an automobile through water or mud so as to splash same on pedestrians is a common pastime with some motorists who have peculiar ideas of what constitutes a joke.

"Give proper warning to pedestrians and other users of the highway. Even animals should receive reasonable notice.

Use Horn for Safety.

"The horn should be reserved for safety purpose; not to signal a person inside of a house nor to attract the attention of people passing.

"Give proper attention to headlights. They often cause inconvenience and danger to others.

"Disobeying the instructions received from traffic officers and trying to steal a few feet of space, instead of remaining in a proper spot, not only annoys pedestrians and other motorists but is a dangerous practice.

"Starting an argument with a traffic officer is not only bad etiquette but is courting trouble with the law.

"Keep in the middle of the road," is a tip that has been construed literally by the roadhog. Drivers of heavy vehicles should keep to the right side of the highway where they belong.

"A common offense against road etiquette is committed when a motor car operator places his car at a crossing so as to obstruct pedestrian traffic, thus compelling pedestrians to walk around his machine.

Keep Looking Ahead.

"Drivers who wish to be considerate of other people will concentrate on what they are doing, look where they are going, not attempt to gaze at passersby and stay in line.

"The exercise of kindness to others, consideration and true courtesy will prevent any operator from getting a wrong attitude of mind for driving in traffic. Any operator who loses his temper, who becomes sulky, or is abnormal from any one of many different causes is unfit to drive because his automobile provides a medium of expression for his personality. If that personality is upset, he is bound to make trouble for himself or for others, generally for both."

Smartness Found Great Handicap to Drivers

What sort of a chauffeur would Emerson, Socrates, the immortal mystics, Napoleon, or Wordsworth have made? Would any of the philosophers, noted professors and great thinkers have been or be, if now living, safe and sane automobile drivers?

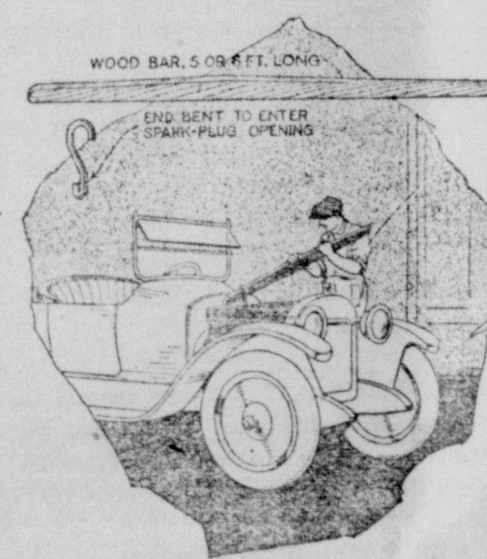

The psychologist answers an emphatic no. Because the minds of such men are usually preoccupied, a condition popularly known as absent-mindedness, the thinker, the dreamer and the schemer are said to lack that coordination of mind and muscle which is essential in the operation of a motor vehicle.

Under existing traffic conditions and prevailing speeds drivers who direct their minds from the business of driving and their eyes from the road ahead are the cause of many accidents.

Modern motorists' demands concentration, but the driver who concentrates on subjects foreign to his driving is probably a greater traffic menace than the driver who is incapable of concentration.

Loosen Engine-Cylinder Head by Use of Prybar

A cylinder head, put on after shellac has been applied to both sides of the gasket, may be very difficult to remove, especially if the gasket must be used again. Driving a wedge under one edge is a practice which invariably destroys the gasket. Slacking off the bolts and starting the engine is almost certain to blow the gasket, and the mechanic is often puzzled for a good method of removing the head with the least damage. In the illustration a prybar method of removal is shown. Simply provide an S-shaped hanger, one end of which can be passed through the spark-plug holes, while a bar engages the upper hook. The tightest cylinder head will come off readily and the gasket can, in most cases, be used again.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Cranking Not Necessary When Engine Is Stubborn

Many motor owners prime their engines, close the relief cocks, turn on the switch and crank until their backs nearly break. A much easier way is to prime the engine with relief cocks open, turn over the engine about twice to each cylinder, then close relief cocks, turn on the switch and throw the wheel back against the compression, and nine times out of ten it will start on the first or second attempt. The reason is that the prime charge is too rich to ignite quickly. The air taken into the relief cocks helps to make a good mixture quickly. It might take 20 revolutions at the crank to get enough oxygen in through the carburetor to vaporize the prime.

Clear View for Safety

To secure a clear view ahead through the glass of the windshield in rainy weather is vitally important to the safety of the motor car and its occupants. Many schemes are used to keep the glass clear in wet weather but perhaps the old-fashioned alcohol and glycerin mixture which is carried in a small bottle and rubbed on the glass as needed is best. If the bottle containing the solution is wrapped in a cloth and stored in the side pocket it will always be ready for use and a cloth to apply it with will be at hand.

Loose Battery Terminals

The cable terminals of old storage batteries frequently slip into the battery connector so far that the cap screw does not draw the connection to a tight fit. This results in high resistance and eventually prevents enough current getting across from the battery to start the engine. If lead foil is wrapped around the cable terminal until it fits the battery connector a really tight fit will be the result.

Why Sparking at Brushes

The commutator is the most vulnerable part of a direct current machine, and should be inspected at more frequent intervals than any other single part. If sparking occurs at brushes, it indicates poor brush contact, caused by either worn brushes, weak brush holder springs, excessive vibration, which may be caused by a bent shaft, an unbalanced gear pinion or improper mounting.

The Baking
Powder Girl

By SIDNEY BLAIR

(Copyright.)

"THE man who said New York's
a town of strangers was right,"
Neal Fuller told himself as he strode
down Fifth avenue. "It's the loneliest place in the world—me for San Francisco the minute my work's done."

Neal was hungry, but he hated the thought of another lonely dinner in a strange restaurant. He decided to get something at a delicatessen and take it back to his hotel, first! That would be better than eating where he could see
other people dining with each other.

He turned down a cross street near
Washington Square and went to Sixth avenue. Just ahead of him was a girl with a Pekinese puppy. She turned into a delicatessen store, and he followed.

"Probably going to get some cold
ham and potato salad for her husband's supper!" he thought disgustedly.

When the pretty girl with the dog was waited on, she bought—baking powder.

"Great Jerusha, she must be going to bake!" thought Neal, and envied
the man she was going to do it for.
He was so absorbed in his thoughts
that he didn't even notice what was happening till suddenly he realized that the Peke had his leash neatly
wound around Neal's legs.

The girl apologized and together
they unwound the leash. She dropped the baking powder, too; it hadn't been wrapped yet, and somehow the lid
came off, deluging Neal with the white
contents of the can.

"Oh, how dreadful!" The girl's lovely face turned pinker than ever. "How terrible! I—oh, can't I do something about it? I live just a few doors from here—if you'd come home with me,
I'm sure mother could get it off."

Neal's dark blue trousers were smeared white; it really seemed the
only thing to do.

Back to her apartment they went, a charming little place high in a great
apartment building. He met Mrs.
Lane, the pretty girl's mother, and he
and Felicia—the pretty girl—looked out of a big window at the roofs of the city and its curving bridges, while Mrs.
Lane got dinner in an absurdly small
kitchenette.

In the dining room there was a picture that made him turn to them suddenly with a question.

"That picture—surely it's the gulls
flying over the bay in San Francisco?"
"Of course it is. That's where we come from," they answered in one breath.

"Great Jerusha!" was all that Neal
could say.

After dinner they went to the
"movies." Two days later, Sunday,
they picnicked on the Palisades. Neal swore that he'd never tasted such good sandwiches and salad—beautifully served in a scooped-out cabbage.

Neal no longer thought of New York
as a lonely city. Suddenly it had become the friendliest city in the world
—except San Francisco, of course.
There were many delightful little meals at the Lanes' apartment, many dinners at the big restaurants where Neal entertained them, lonely places
no longer.

"I was shocked out of my shoes that day I met you, when you bought baking powder," Neal told Felicia, one afternoon. "I'd been watching the
other women who were scrambling dinner together out of the shelves of tinned goods, and I'd about decided that there weren't any women in New York who could cook."

A few days later Felicia appeared with a bandaged hand. She'd hit it with a hammer, she said, when she was putting up some pictures. A little later the other hand showed a long,
red scar. Burned, she explained—
she'd been using a curling iron, and it
had slipped and burned her.

"But I thought your hair was naturally curly," protested Neal.

"It—it is!" stammered Felicia.

She looked unhappy, somehow; her blue eyes, where gaily usually danced, grew sad. Neal wondered what was the reason. He'd come to feel that he wanted to protect her from the world.
He tried hard to find out what was the matter, but Felicia put him off. She said the Peke hadn't been well and
she was worried about him.

"I always thought, till I knew you,
that a woman who likes little dogs
was rather a fool," Neal told her, apologetically. "It seemed so silly for them to waste their time with lap dogs
when they might better be taking care
of children."

"Wang thinks he's a big dog," she answered, with spirit. "And you can't take care of children when you haven't any to take care of!"

"Felicia, will you marry me?" Neal demanded suddenly. "I've loved you ever since that first day, three months
ago. Please, Felicia dear, marry me."

"No," said Felicia. And there were tears in her eyes when she said it.

Neal took her by the shoulders and turned her around so that she had to face him. "Why not?" he demanded.
"Because I can't cook," she answered, and the tears overflowed.
"I've tried my best, since you said a woman ought to know how. I've

She was united in marriage with George W. Rhoads, November 15, 1861. To this union six children were born. The husband and two children preceded her in death.

Those surviving are Mrs. J. R. Hott, Mrs. O. A. Peters, H. O. Rhoads and C. A. Rhoads. She leaves nine grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren.

Of her immediate family, she leaves two brothers, Hilar L. Reed, of Galena, and George W. Reed, of Circleville.

She united with the Methodist Episcopal church at Commercial Point in 1881, and transferred her membership to Ashville Methodist Episcopal church in 1908.

The funeral services were held from the residence and interment was in the cemetery at Darbyville.

GLAND EXTRACT TO HEAL BROKEN BONES

Breaking an arm, a leg or even a hip may not be so serious an accident within a year or two. Recent experiments in Japan indicate that healing broken bones of young persons may be hastened, and the fractured bones of even old persons may knit together if the patient is treated with a certain glandular extract.

Next to the thyroid gland in the neck are four tiny glands known as "parathyroid glands." An extract from these, when swallowed or injected, causes the percentage of calcium and phosphate in blood serum to rise. It is claimed. Large quantities of both these chemicals are needed in bone building. One reason why bones usually heal very slowly is because it takes a long time to extract enough of these substances from the blood.

Doctor Ogawa, a Japanese surgeon, recently has been experimenting with parathyroid extract in the Japanese medical academy of Keijo. He found rats fed with the extract grew twice as much new bone as those not treated with it. It is now being tried out on human beings, and the results so far have encouraged the belief that the long weeks of wearing bandages and plaster casts may be greatly shortened.—From Popular Science Monthly.

TEN EXPEDITIONS FOR ARCTIC SEAS

Some Will Seek the Pole or New Lands, Others Are Scientific.

New York.—At least six expeditions hope this summer to reach the North pole or to find new lands hidden away in the fields of unknown ice. Four other purely scientific expeditions will penetrate far into the North.

It has become almost an international race. By land, sea and air, expeditions representing interests in America, France, Norway, Italy and Russia will penetrate the regions that lured countless explorers before them.

A trade route to the east is sought a landing place for airplanes near the North pole, or a vast hidden continent. But the ancient square-rigged ship of romance has been replaced by science. Airplanes, dirigibles, flying boats and motor sledge now play a vital part.

Commander Byrd's Plans.

The expedition led by Lieutenant Commander R. E. Byrd plans to blaze an air route to the pole itself. Lieutenant Commander Byrd, expects to land his plane at the pole and be back in this country before summer ends. With his ship and airplane crews selected largely from volunteers from commissioned and enlisted men of the naval reserve, Commander Byrd will depend on a three-engined Fokker plane to carry him over the icy wastes at the top of the earth. The shipping board steamer, Chantler, will be used by the expedition, which is being financed by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Thomas F. Ryan, Edsel Ford and Vincent Astor.

Of the three American expeditions the first that will take the air under present plans is that headed by Capt. George W. Wilkins, Australian explorer, now on its way North.

The chief purpose of the expedition is to seek an unknown land believed to lie north of Alaska and Siberia. If land is discovered a base will be established and a flight across the North pole to Spitzbergen will be attempted.

Another American expedition headed by Lieut. Leigh Wade, American round-the-world flyer, also seeks this mystery land, but in addition seeks to make a round-trip flight to the pole. The expedition is supported by alumni of American universities, its personnel and equipment being all American. Five planes are being built for flights which are planned for mid-July.

Lieutenant Wade believes Svalbard is planning a secret flight to the unexplored territory in hope of claiming any land that may be found. Wade hopes to establish the shortest London-to-Tokyo route.

The Byrd expedition, backed in part by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Edsel Ford, also seeks this unknown land.

French Expedition Mystery.

Mysterious motor sledges will play a part in the expedition under the auspices of the French navy department. The sledges are the design of Capt. Otto Sverdrup, Norwegian seaman who piloted Nansen in the Fram on his famous drift past the North pole locked in polar ice. Hydroplanes also will be used.

A Norwegian, Lieutenant Ellissen, hopes to reach the pole in a flying boat, starting from Nova Zembla.

An expedition headed by Harrison Williams, backed by the American Museum of Natural History, and George Palmer Putnam, publisher, will cruise the seas about Greenland to obtain scientific data.

A party from the University of Michigan, led by Prof. William H. Hobbs, will explore Greenland itself.

A Russian expedition to the west shore of Nova Zembla, led by Professor Matonevitch, has been announced. Another Russian expedition will explore a large island north of Siberia, formerly known as Nicholas II land, but now known as Lenin land.

Question of the Moment

"And what?" asked the prospective father-in-law, "do you expect to do for my daughter in the future?"
"I hadn't thought much about it," answered the equally prospective son-in-law. "You see, tomorrow's her birthday and I'm worrying now about her present."

Even

Girl (slipping on new engagement ring)—You've hit on my favorite stone, old thing, which is more than the others did.

Man—It's the same kind I usually buy.

WHY THEY DIG

"Why are these congressional committee always digging into something and stirring up the dirt?"
"Because it's pay dirt, my boy."

Try It! Says a Texan

In the old days in Texas, where men wore boots and frequently died in them, we recall that the epitaph was always followed by the epitaph. It was not so long ago that we met an old friend who used to "ride the peraries" with us, now engaged in the mollycoddish business of a stock broker, and he said: "Texas has become so soft that if you were to spit in a man's face the chances are about even that instead of reaching for his Colt .45 he would ask you to lend him your handkerchief because the tobacco juice was hurting his eyes."—J. AMUSEMENTS

A large audience came, saw and was conquered when "Romola," Lillian Gish's latest picture, opened at the Met theater yesterday for a run of three days. This production, directed by Henry King, is a film version of the famous novel by George Eliot. It is undoubtedly one of the outstanding achievements of an outstanding year in motion picture advancement. For beauty, drama and thrills it stands at the top.

Lillian Gish, as ever, is superb in the title role, and the picture has an added attraction in Dorothy Gish, who is seen with her sister for the first time since "Orphans of the Storm." Ronald Colman, of "The White Sister" fame, is the hero, and William H. Powell is the villain. Others in the cast include Charles Lane, Herbert Grimwood and Amelia Summerville. "Romola" was filmed in Florence, Italy, the locale of the story and this authenticity is very apparent. It is an Inspiration picture, Charles D. Duell, Jr., president; distributed by Metro-Goldwyn.

Doctor Braves Rough Sea to Treat Sailor

New York.—Storms that have been bringing out tragedy and bravery on the Atlantic marooned a surgeon from the liner Berlin on the freighter Hanover. The story was told when the Berlin docked in Hoboken.

When the storm was at its worst a seaman on the freighter suffered a fractured skull when he was struck on the head with a steel hoisting block. The Hanover was without a doctor, so a call was sent to Captain Rehm of the Berlin, which was on the horizon.

The Hanover slowed down to let the Berlin come alongside. The seaman's injury was so serious that Doctor Krueger, assistant surgeon, volunteered to go over the heavy combers to the man. A lifeboat crew took Doctor Krueger to the Hanover. It was stiff going, with the wind high and laden with snow.

When Doctor Krueger had attended the man the seas had grown still rougher, so Captain Rehm sent word for the doctor and the lifeboat crew to remain aboard the Hanover.

WOMAN'S GENIUS SOLVES ORE TREATMENT PROBLEM

Millions Saved, but Originator of Idea Has Passed Into Practical Obscurity.

Denver, Colo.—From a woman's hatred for dirt has developed the oil selective flotation process which has made the treatment of complex and low-grade ores a success. Millions of dollars have been made and saved by the method, although its originator, Carrie Everson, has passed into practical obscurity.

J. J. Clark, majority owner in the big Kittimat mine at Silverton, Colo., tells how she stumbled onto the idea, and other Denver mining men vouch for his story.

"One day in 1897," Clark says, "Miss Everson was in her brother's assay office in Denver and saw a pile of dirty ore sacks, which her woman's instinct for cleanliness impelled her to tackle. She doused them in a pail of sudsy water and swished them around until a scum appeared on the surface of the water—a scum which, to her eyes, appeared to contain mineral values, although at the time she could not conceive of metals floating."

"She removed the scum, poured out the sudsy water and found at the bottom of the pail a sludge which she knew to be only waste rock particles. The mineral values were floated to the top while the rock sank."

"Her brother analyzed the scum and determined that lead and zinc values had ridden to the surface on the grease bubbles of the soap. Just as in the modern flotation process they rise to the surface on tiny rafts of oil."

"The brother took up the idea and started to develop it in a small way, trying to interest many prominent mining men. In a short while many scientific investigators were at work on the same thing, but it was several years before the oil flotation method became any more than a secondary method for separating ores."

"The idea never died out, however, and ten years ago metallurgists in Australia made a great step by floating silver, lead and zinc separately in different oils. The war halted perfection of the process, and it was not until 1920 that both Australian and American metallurgists made real progress and developed the method to a practical position. Now it is used almost throughout the world, and has made paying projects out of workings hitherto unprofitable."

Reportorial Erudition
At an afternoon affair not so long ago, Mrs. Jesse I. Conklin said to a friend who admired her gown: "The first time I wore this dress the society reporter sent to write up the party came to me with, 'Let me see, your dress is embroidered net over—over—well, what is it over?'"
"Over me," I answered."

REVIVAL OF RELIGION IS MOST NEEDED

Blind Preacher Makes Very Strong Appeal at Calvary Evangelical Church.

Evangelistic services are now going on at Calvary Evangelical church. The blind violinist, pianist and singer, preaches every evening. Everybody welcome. Come early to get a seat.

The great need and the glorious possibilities of a revival. What is a revival? "O, Lord, Revive Thy Work." Many times people seem to be afraid of a revival meeting and some people seem to be very nervous. A real genuine touch from heaven is the greatest nerve tonic and nothing is as soothing as a Divine touch from heaven. People go about crying and whining and complaining but get salvation and you will straighten up. Then you need not be afraid of an old-fashioned revival.

Springtime is nature's revival season and we expect things to revive. Business needs to be revived. Something must take place to awaken business. The business people begin to have dollar days, selling two things for the price of one, in order that things might be revived. Should God's people be any less interested in being revived as the church is the greatest institution that ever came into existence.

It is God's work that must be revived. Belonging to church and being quite faithful to the church does not give proof that we are engaged in the work of the Lord. The question is are we saved. Are we conscious that we are now saved. Is God's spirit bearing witness with our spirit that we are a child of God?

If we are a child of God, we belong to church and we will be willing to take our share of the burden, we will say, Lord, here am I. I want to be something you can depend upon. Zealous work in the church does not give proof we are a child of God and sadly failed to be in work for God.

You can kneel seventy-seven times a month before the sacraments and partake of them, but on your way to hell.

We need more than these things. What we need in Circleville and all the United States is a revival of old Apostolic faith in God's word. Being made free from sin, we have our fruit for holiness and everlasting life.

Brother, let us accept the word of God and be willing to develop by his safe teachings of God's word. We need a revival of faith in the ministry. There are some men that really know and feel that they are there as messengers of God and to present the message the best he can.

We need a revival in old-fashion prayer. We must get our heart into the thing. There are those who really know how to hold on to God and split the skies and bring down the power from heaven.

We need a revival in faith in God. It has been said that they expect to find the bones of Jesus sometime in excavation. This shows that there are men that do not believe that Jesus lives. Too many people pray and never expect their prayers to be answered. What is the besetting sin? The besetting sin is unbelief.

DECRIES ALL FEAR OF ATHLETIC HEART
College students need no longer fear that four years of hard football or track work will leave them with a shaky "athletic heart" in middle age. Experiments by Dr. Burgess Gordon of the Boston Peter Bent Brigham hospital on men and animals revealed that the heart, instead of enlarging after strenuous exercise, actually shrinks. Furthermore, no enlargement of the heart resulted after prolonged athletic training.

Doctor Gordon made his observations on Boston marathon runners, and rabbits with normal and abnormal hearts. The rabbits were exercised to exhaustion, and X-ray pictures taken immediately afterward revealed a shrinkage which took time to disappear. The strained hearts of marathon runners also got smaller, Doctor Gordon said, and did not return to normal for several hours.

Athletes were studied to note any permanent enlargement of the heart which could be blamed on the exercise, but it was found that the most prolonged vigorous efforts did not produce the much dreaded hypertrophy of the heart.

Seeing and Believing

By H. IRVING KING
(Copyright.)

THERE was only one fault with Helen Chapman—she was inclined to be jealous. Well, why shouldn't she be with such a paragon as Arthur Waite in her keeping? To tell the truth Arthur needed very little watching, for he was very much in love. So Arthur and Helen got along swimmingly together; the engagement ring sparkled on Helen's pretty little hand and the wedding day was fixed. Then out of a clear and sunlit sky came a simoon, a typhoon, a tornado, a hurricane which played havoc and mixed things up.

Helen and Arthur lived in a town of about ten or twelve thousand inhabitants and "on the hill," of course—where all the "best people" lived. One day, as Helen alighted from a train at the station—she had been away on a visit to some friends for a couple of weeks—she saw Arthur putting two women on board that same train.

One of the women was tall, spare and angular, dressed in black and had an air of "prunes and prisms." The other was a dainty little creature, apparently about thirty, well-dressed, red-checked, blond-haired and sprightly. Arthur assisted the elder lady on board and then, turning to the younger one, took her glowing cheeks in both his hands and kissed her affectionately on the lips before he lifted her bodily onto the steps of the car.

Helen had seen enough, and more than enough. Her rumbout was waiting and she got in. How could she have been foolish enough to have left Arthur for two whole weeks unprotected? She might have known what would happen. But who was that brazen creature whom Arthur had so shamelessly kissed? Some old "flame" of his, doubtless, who had, somehow, learned of his unprotected state and had come on to cast again her siren charms around him.

That evening Arthur, the faithless, called at the Chapman residence. He came in all buoyancy, life and ardor to welcome Helen home; but stood stock still before the rigid form and the frigid face which confronted him. "Why, what's the matter?" he gasped.

"Sit down," said Helen, waving her hand toward a chair. "As I got off the train this morning," she went on in measured tones, "I saw you putting two women on board. Who were they?"

"You saw me?" cried Arthur, brightening up, "why didn't you sing out? I didn't see you. That was Aunt Nancy—my rich old-maid aunt I have been telling you about—the one who is going to set us up housekeeping when we get married. She was on her way to Bar Harbor and just stopped off here to say 'how do do' to me. She was awfully sorry not to meet you."

"How old is your aunt?" asked Helen with a judicial air.

"Aunt Nancy?" replied Arthur. "let's see—she's fifty, I should say."

"She looks sixty," said Helen.

"No," meditated Arthur, "I don't think she is—she may be getting close to it, though—anyway she is over fifty. But for heaven's sake don't ever tell her she looks it, or goodbye to all our expectations from Aunt Nancy."

Helen looked him straight in the eyes. "Who was the other woman?" she fired the question at him like a shot.

Arthur never could stand that soul-searching look of Helen's—it made him feel guilty whether he was or not—it made him nervous. His eyes sought the ceiling as he replied with a weak little laugh: "Oh, that was Miss Rathbun, Aunt Nancy's companion. Aunt Nancy thinks the world of her and has her down in her will for a nice little legacy."

"I see," said Helen. "I also saw, I saw you kissing and hugging Miss Rathbun in public this very morning at the station. Here is your ring, sir, good evening." She drew the engagement ring from her finger, placed it on the table and swept from the room. Arthur sat for a minute gazing blankly after her. Then he took his hat and wandered out into the night.

Three days later Helen was informed by the maid that "a lady" who wished to see her was in the drawing room. Helen went down—and there stood that brazen creature whom she had last seen exchanging kisses with Arthur on the station platform! "Oh, you are Helen!" cried the lively lady; "and you are just a dear. Arthur wrote me all about it and I came right on." She had her arms around Helen now and was kissing her.

"Miss Rathbun!" cried Helen struggling in the embrace.

"Why, bless you," laughed the lady; "I am not Miss Rathbun—I'm Aunt Nancy, and I'm fifty-five years old. You wouldn't think it, now, to look at me, would you? It's all in the makeup, my dear. I was so tickled when Arthur wrote me that you were jealous of me that I sent him a check for five hundred dollars and brought you a bracelet—it's somewhere in my bag here. I have tried all the beauty parlors and all the beauty doctors in the country and now I am convinced I have got hold of the right one at last. Now, my dear, let me give you a piece of advice: Don't take any stock in the saying 'Seeing is believing' again 'Tisn't so in these days."

Ten minutes later Arthur came sauntering in with a grin on his face—the brute! And Helen was too crushed and humiliated to resent it.

Reindeer Characteristics

It may be said that reindeer have some of the characteristics of sheep, cattle and horses. They flock together like sheep, but graze more like cattle, and in intelligence and activity they more nearly resemble the horse. Reindeer are much more intelligent than cattle, but not so intelligent as the horse.

Living—and Living

Talking and reading are among the most human of occupations, in which a large part of our lives is spent. CHIROPRACTOR
PAL OF KATHE
IS SENTENCED

Owens Asks Court To Be Lenient on Grounds He Was Made the "Goat"—Seeking Ring Leaders.

Claiming that he had been made the "goat" by Felix J. Kathe of this city who has just started a two-year sentence in the "pen" for auto stealing, Dr. David Owens, Portsmouth chiropractor, formerly of this city, today in the Franklin county common pleas court was given an indeterminate sentence in the State reformatory on the same charge.

The plea that Owens had been made the "goat" by Kathe was advanced by Owens' attorney, Judge A. Z. Blair, of Portsmouth, who asked for a suspended sentence on this ground.

In overruling the plea, Common Pleas Judge Sowers said he had never imposed a suspended sentence for auto theft. He said, however, that he was willing to aid in obtaining a parole for Owens after the latter has served part of his sentence.

The automobile in question was stolen from Ralph Kirsch, of Columbus, last August. Kathe and Owens subsequently were arrested and Kathe is now serving his sentence in the penitentiary.

In connection with wholesale thefts of machines in and about Portsmouth, it was learned today that George F. Ruder, Columbus detective, Federal Officer Bolan and H. A. Nef, an insurance official, were in the River City during the last few days rounding up cars that have been stolen in that vicinity.

To date they have found four stolen cars at Buena Vista and Rome and one in South Portsmouth.

The officers say that they have a line on from fifteen to twenty stolen cars in Vanceburg and that vicinity and will recover them within the next few days. All of the cars have been stolen in and near Portsmouth the officers stated.

Speaking of arrests that are to be made, one of the officers said that if an arrest or two is made a real automobile ring of thieves will be uncovered.

"We have every reason to believe one exists in this section and has been doing a splendid business," one of the officers stated. — Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

WARRANTS
FOR DOCTORS

Forty-two Face Charges of Violating Prohibition Law in New York Cleanup.

New York, March 29.—Issuance of warrants for 15 more physicians and two alleged agents brought the total number of doctors, druggists and agents of distilleries charged with violation of the prohibition law through "bootleg prescriptions" to 56, including 42 doctors.

The federal grand jury is expected shortly to file indictments against many other individuals. It has been estimated that 100 physicians are involved in the illegal sale of prescription books to druggists or distillery agents.

Nearly as many druggists and agents are also said to face the possibility of indictment.

Early Theatrical "Show"

According to the proceedings of the Washington Academy of Sciences, the first theatrical performance in Washington of which there is any record was held in 1801 in Blodgett's unfinished hotel, near the site of the former Post-Office department, at Seventh and F streets. Rough boards were put in as temporary seats for the audience.

BONE MEAL, SALT
AND LIME BIG
THREE FOR CHICKS

Bone meal is one of the essential parts of the ration for chickens. Extensive investigations in feeding chickens recently made by D. C. Kennard at the Ohio Experiment Station, have shown that bone meal is one of the "big three" minerals in a balanced feed for chickens. The other two are oyster shells or high grade limestone and salt.

Bone meal is added to the mash at the rate of 2 to 4 per cent, the oyster shells or limestone is kept before the birds in hoppers or on the ground, and the salt is mixed with the mash at the rate of one-half to one pound to one hundred pounds of mash.

There are different kinds of bone meal, Mr. Kennard explains. Poultry bone meal, which is usually the "raw" bone meal and of granulated medium, or chick size, is the preferable kind.

The so-called raw bone meal is a misnomer as the product is cooked and sterilized. It should not be confused with green bone which is really raw or uncooked.

High grade special or odorless steamed bone meal may be used, but as a rule the fertilizer steamed bone meal is not suitable for feeding to poultry.

In case the poultry "raw" bone meal is not carried in stock by local dealers it can easily be procured on special order.

BETTER FATHER,
BETTER SON

The father of a man who is under sentence of death in England, writes to him from Ceylon, where he is an exile: "My sins seem to have been visited on your head, and I pray that you will forgive me before you die. If I had been a better father this might not have happened, and I am filled with terrible regret for the past."

Many a moral is being pointed from this pathetic and tragic letter, but it seems to have been overlooked, that if there is anything in heredity, then logically, the writer might excuse himself and blame his own ancestors.

There is reason to believe that one may inherit a tendency to vice and even to crime. Our duty is to make an environment superior to the pull of this abnormality and, above all, to seek inward regeneration. Correct habit based on high principles is probably man's best defense against evil ancestors, and his best line of communication with the good ones. The road to Hades may indeed be paved with good intentions, and it is equally true that the best road the other way is paved with good habits.

The Chinese go the whole way in moral responsibility. The man who disgraces himself disgraces his ancestry, and any responsibility incurred passes on to all the succeeding generations of his descendants.—Atlanta Journal.

Novels Losing Popularity

There is a reaction against the modern novel and novel reading, according to one of Detroit's librarians. People who used to look only for the latest best seller now ask for Seventeenth and Eighteenth century classics. They are delving in books of travel and biography and even political economy. They come to the library more frequently, too, for this more serious reading, she says.—Detroit News.

Duty's Call

Every mission constitutes a pledge of duty: Every man is bound to consecrate his every faculty to its fulfillment. He will derive his rule of action from the profound conviction of that duty.—Mazzini.

Antlers of Deer

Deer antlers are shed each year, usually soon after the close of the breeding season, to be renewed the following spring. Sometimes antlers are straight and unbranched, but usually there are branches, called tines or snags, and the number of these increases with age, so that the finest antlers are on fully matured males.

WHAT IS SPENT

On Golf Each Year Would Pay Interest on War Debts.

Billiards, an indoor game, rivals golf in number of players, and basket ball is rapidly approaching golf numerically, it is reported in an article in this week's Liberty. But for actual players, for expense and importance (to the players), golf is the big game.

"Attempts have been made," it is explained, "to estimate the amount of money expended on golf and no accurate estimate can be reached. But the figures show that enough is spent on golf each year to pay interest on all war debts."

"The United States Golf Association experts estimate that there are now about 4,780 organized golf clubs in America. A survey of the field shows that approximately 1,422,014 acres are used for golf. This would make a state almost as large as Delaware."

"There are, according to estimates, 2,150,000 golfers, of whom 1,115,000 are classed as regulars and members of recognized clubs.

"On the 4,780 golf courses and links there are 81,180 holes, this being figured on the number of eighteen-hole and nine-hole courses in the country."

"The average yardage of these holes, if placed end to end, would cover 17,824 miles, so a golfer could tee off in New York and play around the world as far as Meshed, Persia, if he drove westward."

"The number of golf balls used in the United States each season is now estimated at sixty-two million, including the remades."

Switch Was Psychological

It is estimated there were only one-fifth as many books on child psychology when alder switches grew in every back yard.—Detroit News.

BOWLING DISCS

Used Centuries Ago By Hawaiian Bobles Unearthed.

Honolulu, H. T., March 29.—A number of discs of polished lava used by Hawaiian nobles centuries ago in a bowling game known as mai-ka, have been discovered by excavators at work on the site of the royal palace and palm grove of Hawaii's kings where the Royal Hawaiian Hotel is now under construction.

The discs are about two and a half inches in diameter and an inch and a quarter thick. The object of the game, according to David Malo, an authority on Hawaiian customs, was two-fold—to roll the discs between certain stakes set on the earthen course, and at the same time outdo the other contestants in the distance rolled.

Up until a quarter of a century ago some of the mai-ka courses, worn smooth by centuries of use, were still plainly visible at various localities in the islands.

FATHER WILL PRACTICE LAW

In Court Presided Over By His Son, Judge Carl V. Weygandt.

Cleveland, March 29.—(UP.)—Common Pleas Judge Carl V. Weygandt obtained his boyhood ambition today. He came back today to his old home town of Wooster and sat on the common pleas bench there as a judge.

Before his bar will appear all his old schoolmates and in addition his father, William E. Weygandt, who is also an attorney, will probably have to plead cases before his son.

Weygandt left Wooster in 1913 to attend Western Reserve University Law School and then practiced law in Cleveland before he was made a judge here. It is his first official visit to Wooster.

MAN EVER WAGING FIGHT ON DISEASE

Happy legends to the contrary, there seems no reason to believe that the world ever has known a golden age of health. Geologists find diseased bones which are thought to show that even great prehistoric lizards, and after them the early mammals, suffered from tumors which, according to the advertisers, will claim the teeth of four out of five of us. Man probably falls heir to troubles which other flesh suffered before him.

By heeding in crowds, by giving up his dower rights of sunlight and space, he even has added to many of those troubles, has created wholly new ways of wracking body and mind. For a time the balance of life and death promised doom to cities; they survived only because life was produced abundantly and cheaply without their walls, and the best and most adventurous were fed into them. The slow process of observation and control which has made it safer now to live in a big city than in a village (and often safer to live in a city than in the open country itself), is the science of public health.—Survey Graphic.

The Modern Gait

President Frank H. Alfred of the Pere Marquette line was talking, at a luncheon in Detroit, about the steel-trussed concrete roadways whereon he expects Pere Marquette trains to travel in the future almost with the speed of airplanes.

"We mustn't lag behind. Everything, you know, has speeded up amazingly," Mr. Alfred ended with a smile. "Why, it used to take a young man longer to lay his heart at a girl's feet than it takes the young man of today to be introduced, fall in love, promise, marry, run off with some one else, get divorced and undergo a prison term for nonpayment of alimony."

New Spanish Feast

Among the devices the dictatorship in Spain is devising to promote culture and rouse the nation is a new festival, the feast of the book. It will be held every year on October 7, the birthday of Cervantes. On that day in all official centers in Spain, at military and naval masses, in public and in private, the day will be honored by free distribution of books by the government and the municipalities. On books purchased October 7, bookshelves will have to allow a handsome discount.

x HARTMAN THEATER. x
x x x x x x x x

George Arliss, leading actor of the English speaking stage, returns to the Hartman theater, Columbus, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, March 29, 30 and 31, with Wednesday matinee, to appear in Winthrop Ames' production of John Galsworthy's play "Old English," which is said to give Arliss the greatest role of his career. Recalling the Arliss Disraeli, Alexander Hamilton and Rajah of Rukh in "The Green Goddess," this seems a broad statement, but certain it is that "Old English" is a different kind of a character from those associated with the name of Arliss.

Sylvanus Heythrop, called Old English but his associates, is not the usual Galsworthy hero. The English author, hitherto impartial, almost afraid, as it were, of taking sides with any of his characters, pleads the cause of an octogenarian sinner, who is about to meet the first defeat and who goes to his end magnificently. As Robert L. Stevenson put it, "gladly he lived and gladly he dies." To look for a moral in "Old English" may be to find it, but it so highly is embroidered by the author that he will be brave who shall try to reduce the drama to platitudes.

Winthrop Ames has produced "Old English." Ames staged "Strife" and "The Pigeon" in America. He has brought out many notable plays. It would seem that in Ames Galsworthy meets a producer entirely in sympathy with his work. The cast includes all the players who impressed New York during the two hundred nights "Old English" was acted there, Irby Marshall is leading woman for Mr. Arliss. Ivan F. Simpson will be remembered for his portrayal of Watkins, the butler, in "The Green Goddess." Others in the company are Cecile Dixon, Molly Johnson, Ethel Griffies, Henrietta Goodwin, Murray Kinnell, Robert Harrigan, Henry Morrell, Gilbert Cowan, Gordon McRae, Guy Cunningham, Perry Norman, Lewis A. Sealy, John Hall, Edward Cooper, M. Murray Stephens, John Parrish, Arthur Villars and Thomas Donnelly.

WET AND DRY REFERENDUM IS IN SIGHT

DECKS CLEARED FOR ACTION SHOWDOWN ON PROHIBITION

Borah, Dry, To Sponsor Ballot—Liberals Hail Offer With Welcome and Joy—Amendment Proposed To Edge Resolution Placing Three Specific Questions On the Ticket—Repeal or Modification To Be Determined—Postal Canvas Planned If States Fail To Act.

Out of the continuing din and clutter of the prohibition controversy there emerged Monday some definite action by both congress and the administration to further reconstitute the much-reconstituted enforcement machinery of the federal government. The house passed without a record vote the bill fathered by the treasury and favored by both wets and dries, to place all except the highest officers of the prohibition forces under civil service.

Coincidentally, Assistant Secretary Andrews created and filled two new posts in his enforcement staff.

One of the new officials will have supervision over brewery permits, and the other over permits for withdrawal of wine.

Even the leaders were in agreement in support of the civil service bill, its passage was opposed by Representative Blanton, Democrat, Texas who supplemented his remarks by reading a letter from a minister accusing another minister of going on a drunken spree.

In the senate both wets and dries held their peace while they prepared for next week's committee hearings on pending modification bills.

The wets summoned Secretary Andrews and District Attorney Buckner of New York, as first witnesses to appear next Monday and promised that other distinguished personages would be asked by them to appear later.

Just as he was receiving the senate summons, General Andrews disclosed he proposed to do some investigating of his own, and to that end would begin on July 1, an inspection trip taking him along the southern boundary to the Pacific coast, and back thru the chain of enforcement outposts on the edge of Canada.

Another batch of petitions and legislative proposals, including the memorial of the Rhode Island house for a nation-wide prohibition referendum were loosed during the day on both senate and house.

Senator Borah, a dry, introduced an amendment to make more specific a pending referendum proposal.

Chairman Graham of the house judiciary committee, which has been urged both by the administration and the Anti-Saloon League to provide more judicial machinery to handle prohibition cases, presented a bill to create 10 new federal judges, scattered over most of the country.

The summons issued to General Andrews by the senate prohibition investigators were authorized at the request of Senator Edge, Republican, New Jersey.

His New Jersey colleague, Senator Edwards, a Democrat, said he expected to call in Hudson Maxim, the inventor.

Still another wet, Senator Bruce, Democrat, Maryland, asked that steps be taken to have a high official of the Canadian government advise the committee of the prohibition situation in Canada.

Despite its indorsement by the Anti-Saloon League, the civil service bill was opposed by Representative Blanton as a "trap laid by the wet members of congress to discredit present prohibition employees.

The bill was defended by its author,

Representative Cramton, Republican, Michigan, a dry, as a means of redemption from the present system "under which many positions in the prohibition unit are under political control," and by Representative Hill, Republican, Maryland, a wet, on the theory that something should be done to remedy the present situation."

Sick Fire Dispatcher Sticks to Post; Faints

New York.—An unwritten rule in the fire department that a fireman in an emergency must stick till he drops, was literally observed by Fire Alarm Dispatcher William S. Riordan, "ablaze" with fever, who stuck to his key at the fire alarm telegraph bureau until he fell unconscious to the floor. This in spite of the fact that Fire Department Surgeon Dr. Harry M. Archer, several hours earlier, had found Riordan a very sick man and ordered him to bed.

The physician again cautioned him, but he was adamant. Doctor Archer had hardly left when the dispatcher received a flash of a fire. Riordan sent in a three-alarm signal at 1:18. Then he called Doctor Archer to take care of eight firemen of engine company No. 16 who were overcome by smoke at that fire.

Corsets Supplied for Every Figure

Combination Brassiere and Girdle Makes Its Bid for Approval

Corset styles are largely influenced by the demands of fashion, and since fashion is insisting upon curves in opposition to the straight silhouette of the last few years, corsetry is now of vital interest to every woman. The curved lines of necessity need more attention, observes a fashion authority in the New York Times, for this type of figure requires greater control than the straight silhouette. To meet this problem, and in fact to solve it, the combination brassiere and girdle has been introduced in new variations. There are also garter belts, little bandeaux, all-flexible step-ins lightly boned and boneless, as well as the closed back and clasp-front girdles and the new type of laced-back corset with self-reducing lines. Materials include knitted or woven silks and rayons, poplins and, for the large figure, brocades.

For the slim girl who prefers the separate brassiere there is a step-in girdle with a panel-back and front of brocaded material and wide elastic side sections. Double garters are the only other feature. Then there is the "Charleston" girdle made along the same lines and of the same material, but having the front panel equipped with an extra section which has two elastic straps that fasten to the lower edge of the girdle in back. This model is made without garters.

Another combination for the slender figure is made entirely of knitted rayon. It has very long lines and is reinforced with silk elastic gores at the sides. A narrow elastic strap across the back holds the brassiere in place. A long basque brassiere model has a hip confiner, and is made of knitted silk and heavy satin. The satin is used in the girdle part and the rayon for the brassiere top. The elastic side gores, two short bones in front, and an unusually long girdle help mold the figure along youthful lines.

Chubby figures have a style of combination all their own. Knitted or woven silks and meshes are used for these models, with, of course, the usual elastic gores at the hips. The girdle in these models is of the step-in variety, but the brassiere part hooks either in the back or at the sides, thereby assuring perfect fit. Elastic shoulder straps give greater resiliency to the figure.

For the medium-sized woman, or what is technically known as the "full average figure," there is a combination with the brassiere hooking at the side. Three short bones in front insure the flat appearance that is so desired across the abdomen. These combinations usually come in the heavier materials, which give greater control throughout.

Large-size figures have combinations in the step-in variety, too, and, in addition, an extra band underneath the girdle section to hold the diaphragm firmly in place and to confine the hips.

Hat of Brown Straw Is Liked by Young Matron

This smart hat for the young matron is of brown straw with a facing of satin. The fancy pompon on the side is of red gold. It is regarded as a chic chapeau for spring.

New Names for Colors for Spring Wearables

The same old pastel colors continue to dominate the field of fashion for spring, but most of them have new names. Among the red may be found tintoret, azalea, grape and corolla, but they are all allied with rose red. In the blue scale are renaissance, lavender, anemone and janges. The greens include turquoise, meadow, catkill, alligator and citrenee.

The yellow-orange ranges comprises champagne, apricot and melissande. Pay your money and take your choice.

Platinum Gray New Shade

Gold and silver have had their day and now are being forced to share fashion popularity with the other metals. One of the most popular shades for coats and dresses today is platinum gray, since gloves, shoes, stockings and hat of a matching shade may be worn with it. The reddish-copper tones are being exploited fur coats in lame and copper-dyed furs. Bronze is being taken up in similar fashion.

GOOD MANNERS IN MOTORING URGED

Connecticut Expert Outlines Code of Ethics for Use of Drivers.

Robbins B. Stoeckel, commissioner of motor vehicles of the state of Connecticut, has proposed the following code of ethics or good manners in motoring:

"To be a good driver, in the terms of applied ethics, is to be a person of good manners, truly an altruist, ready to see and appreciate the problems of others, to make proper allowance for them and to exercise even a little more patience, care and consideration than is actually called for by the letter of the law.

"Driving an automobile through water or mud so as to splash same on pedestrians is a common pastime with some motorists who have peculiar ideas of what constitutes a joke.

"Give proper warning to pedestrians and other users of the highway. Even animals should receive reasonable notice.

Use Horn for Safety.
"The horn should be reserved for safety purpose; not to signal a person inside of a house nor to attract the attention of people passing.

"Give proper attention to headlights. They often cause inconvenience and danger to others.

"Disobeying the instructions received from traffic officers and trying to steal a few feet of space, instead of remaining in a proper spot, not only annoys pedestrians and other motorists but is a dangerous practice.

"Starting an argument with a traffic officer is not only bad etiquette but is costing trouble with the law.

"Keep in the middle of the road," is a tip that has been construed literally by the roadhog. Drivers of heavy vehicles should keep to the right side of the highway where they belong.

"A common offense against road etiquette is committed when a motor car operator places his car at a crossing so as to obstruct pedestrian traffic, thus compelling pedestrians to walk around his machine.

Keep Looking Ahead.

"Drivers who wish to be considerate of other people will concentrate on what they are doing, look where they are going, not attempt to gaze at passersby and stay in line.

"The exercise of kindness to others, consideration and true courtesy will prevent any operator from getting a wrong attitude of mind for driving in traffic. Any operator who loses his temper, who becomes sulky, or is abnormal from any one of many different causes is unfit to drive because his automobile provides a medium of expression for his personality. If that personality is upset, he is bound to make trouble for himself or for others, generally for both."

Smartness Found Great Handicap to Drivers

What sort of a chauffeur would Emerson, Socrates, or Wordsworth have made? Would any of the philosophers, noted professors and great thinkers have been or be, if now living, safe and sane automobile drivers?

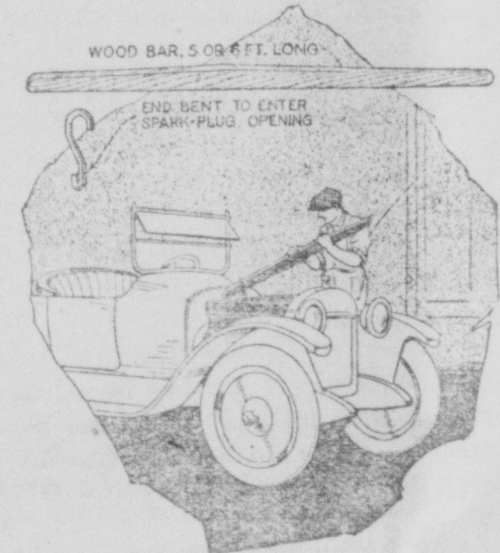

The psychologist answers an emphatic no. Because the minds of such men are usually preoccupied, a condition popularly known as absent-mindedness, the thinker, the dreamer and the schemer are said to lack that co-ordination of mind and muscle which is essential in the operation of a motor vehicle.

Under existing traffic conditions and prevailing speeds drivers who direct their minds from the business of driving and their eyes from the road ahead are the cause of many accidents.

Modern motorist demands concentration, but the driver who concentrates on subjects foreign to his driving is probably a greater traffic menace than the driver who is incapable of concentration.

Loosen Engine-Cylinder Head by Use of Prybar

A cylinder head, put on after shellac has been applied to both sides of the gasket, may be very difficult to remove, especially if the gasket must be used again. Driving a wedge under one edge is a practice which invariably destroys the gasket. Slacking off the bolts and starting the engine is almost certain to blow the gasket, and the mechanic is often puzzled for a good method of removing the head with the least damage. In the illustration a prybar method of removal is shown. Simply provide an S-shaped hanger, one end of which can be passed through the spark-plug holes, while a bar engages the upper hook. The tightest cylinder head will come off readily and the gasket can, in most cases, be used again.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Cranking Not Necessary When Engine Is Stubborn

Many motor owners prime their engines, close the relief cocks, turn on the switch and crank until their backs nearly break. A much easier way is to prime the engine with relief cocks open, turn over the engine about twice to each cylinder, then close relief cocks, turn on the switch and throw the wheel back against the compression, and nine times out of ten it will start on the first or second attempt. The reason is that the prime charge is too rich to ignite quickly. The air taken into the relief cocks helps to make a good mixture quickly. It might take 20 revolutions at the crank to get enough oxygen in through the carburetor to vaporize the prime.

Clear View for Safety

To secure a clear view ahead through the glass of the windshield in rainy weather is vitally important to the safety of the motor car and its occupants. Many schemes are used to keep the glass clear in wet weather but perhaps the old-fashioned alcohol and glycerin mixture which is carried in a small bottle and rubbed on the glass as needed is best. If the bottle containing the solution is wrapped in a cloth and stowed in the side pocket it will always be ready for use and cloth to apply it with will be at hand.

Loose Battery Terminals

The cable terminals of old storage batteries frequently slip into the battery connector so far that the cap screw does not draw the connection to a tight fit. This results in high resistance and eventually prevents enough current getting across from the battery to start the engine. If lead foil is wrapped around the cable terminal until it fits the battery connector a really tight fit will be the result.

Why Sparking at Brushes

The commutator is the most vulnerable part of a direct current machine, and should be inspected at more frequent intervals than any other single part. If sparking occurs at brushes, it indicates poor brush contact, caused by either worn brushes, weak brush holder springs, excessive vibration which may be caused by a bent shaft, an unbalanced gear pinion or improper mounting.

The Baking Powder Girl

By SIDNEY BLAIR

(Copyright.)

"THE man who said New York's
a town of strangers was right,"
Neal Fuller told himself as he strode
down Fifth avenue. "It's the loneliest
place in the world—me for San Francisco the minute my work's done."

Neal was hungry, but he hated the thought of another lonely dinner in a strange restaurant. He decided to get something at a delicatessen and take it back to his hotel, first! That would be better than eating where he could see
other people dining with each other.

He turned down a cross street near
Washington Square and went to Sixth
avenue. Just ahead of him was a girl with a Pekingese puppy. She turned into a delicatessen store, and he followed.

"Probably going to get some cold
ham and potato salad for her husband's supper!" he thought disgustedly.

When the pretty girl with the dog
was waited on, she bought—baking
powder.

"Great Jerusha, she must be going
to bake!" thought Neal, and envied
the man she was going to do it for.
He was so absorbed in his thoughts
that he didn't even notice what was happening till suddenly he realized
that the Peke had his leash neatly
wound around Neal's legs.

The girl apologized and together
they unwound the leash. She dropped
the baking powder, too; it hadn't been
wrapped yet, and somehow the lid
came off, deluging Neal with the white
contents of the can.

"Oh, how dreadful!" The girl's lovely face turned pinker than ever. "How terrible! I—oh, can't I do something about it? I live just a few doors from
here—if you'd come home with me,
I'm sure mother could get it off."

Neal's dark blue trousers were
smeared white; it really seemed the
only thing to do.

Back to her apartment they went, a
charming little place high in a great
apartment building. He met Mrs.
Lane, the pretty girl's mother, and he
and Felicia—the pretty girl—looked
out of a big window at the roofs of the
city and its curving bridges, while Mrs.
Lane got dinner in an absurdly small
kitchenette.

In the dining room there was a picture that made him turn to them suddenly with a question.

"That picture—surely it's the gulls
flying over the bay in San Francisco?"

"Of course it is. That's where we come from," they answered in one
breath.

"Great Jerusha!" was all that Neal
could say.

After dinner they went to the
"movies." Two days later, Sunday,
they picnicked on the Palisades. Neal
swore that he'd never tasted such good
sandwiches and salad—beautifully
served in a scooped-out cabbage.

Neal no longer thought of New York
as a lonely city. Suddenly it had become the friendliest city in the world
—except San Francisco, of course.
There were many delightful little
meals at the Lanes' apartment, many dinners at the big restaurants where Neal entertained them, lonely places
no longer.

"I was shocked out of my shoes that
day I met you, when you bought baking powder," Neal told Felicia, one
afternoon. "I'd been watching the
other women who were scrambling dinner together out of the shelves of tinned goods, and I'd about decided
that there weren't any women in New York who could cook."

A few days later Felicia appeared
with a bandaged hand. She'd hit it
with a hammer, she said, when she was putting up some pictures. A little later the other hand showed a long,
red scar. Burned, she explained—
she'd been using a curling iron, and it
had slipped and burned her.

"But I thought your hair was naturally curly," protested Neal.

"It—is it!" stammered Felicia.

She looked unhappy, somehow; her blue eyes, where gaiety usually danced,
grew sad. Neal wondered what was the reason. He'd come to feel that he wanted to protect her from the world.
He tried hard to find out what was the matter, but Felicia put him off. She said the Peke hadn't been well and
she was worried about him.

"I always thought, till I knew you,
that a woman who likes little dogs
was rather a fool," Neal told her, apologetically. "It seemed so silly for them to waste their time with lap dogs
when they might better be taking care
of children."

"Wang thinks he's a big dog," she answered, with spirit. "And you can't take care of children when you haven't
any to take care of!"

"Felicia, will you marry me?" Neal
demanded suddenly. "I've loved you
ever since that first day, three months
ago. Please, Felicia dear, marry me."

"No," said Felicia. And there were
tears in her eyes when she said it.

Neal took her by the shoulders and
turned her around so that she had to face him. "Why not?" he demanded.
"Because I can't cook," she answered, and the tears overflowed.
"I've tried my best, since you said a
woman ought to know how. I've burned myself terribly. I don't know a thing about cooking, and I don't believe I ever will."

"Great Jerusha!" exclaimed Neal, taking her in his arms. "As if a little thing like that mattered!"

GLAND EXTRACT TO HEAL BROKEN BONES

Breaking an arm, a leg or even a hip may not be so serious an accident within a year or two. Recent experiments in Japan indicate that healing broken bones of young persons may be hastened, and the fractured bones of even old persons may knit together if the patient is treated with a certain glandular extract.

Next to the thyroid gland in the neck are four tiny glands known as "parathyroid glands." An extract from these, when swallowed or injected, causes the percentage of calcium and phosphate in blood serum to rise. It is claimed. Large quantities of both these chemicals are needed in bone building. One reason why bones usually heal very slowly is because it takes a long time to extract enough of these substances from the blood.

Doctor Ogawa, a Japanese surgeon, recently has been experimenting with parathyroid extract in the Japanese medical academy of Keijo. He found rats fed with the extract grew twice as much new bone as those not treated with it. It is now being tried out on human beings, and the results so far have encouraged the belief that the long weeks of wearing bandages and plaster casts may be greatly shortened.—From Popular Science Monthly.

TEN EXPEDITIONS FOR ARCTIC SEASSome Will Seek the Pole or New Lands, Others Are Scientific.

New York.—At least six expeditions hope this summer to reach the North pole or to find new lands hidden away in the fields of unknown ice. Four other purely scientific expeditions will penetrate far into the North.

It has become almost an international race. By land, sea and air, expeditions representing interests in America, France, Norway, Italy and Russia will penetrate the regions that lured countless explorers before them.

A trade route to the east is sought a landing place for airplanes near the North pole, or a vast hidden continent. But the ancient square-rigged ship of romance has been replaced by science. Airplanes, dirigibles, flying boats and motor sledge now play a vital part.

Commander Byrd's Plans.

The expedition led by Lieutenant Commander R. E. Byrd plans to blaze an air route to the pole itself. Lieutenant Commander Byrd, expects to land his plane at the pole and be back in this country before summer ends. With his ship and airplane crews selected largely from volunteers from commissioned and enlisted men of the naval reserve, Commander Byrd will depend on a three-engined Pockel plane to carry him over the icy wastes at the top of the earth. The shipping board steamer, Chantler, will be used by the expedition, which is being financed by John D. Rockefeller Jr., Thomas F. Ryan, Edsel Ford and Vincent Astor.

Of the three American expeditions the first that will take the air under present plans is that headed by Capt. George H. Wilkins, Australian explorer, now on its way North.

The chief purpose of the expedition is to seek an unknown land believed to lie north of Alaska and Siberia. If land is discovered a base will be established and a flight across the North pole to Spitzbergen will be attempted.

Another American expedition headed by Lieut. Leigh Wade, American round-the-world flyer, also seeks this mystery land, but in addition seeks to make a round-trip flight to the pole. The expedition is supported by alumni of American universities, its personnel and equipment being all American. Five planes are being built for flights which are planned for mid-July.

Lieutenant Wade believes Svalbard is planning a secret flight to the unexplored territory in hope of obtaining any land that may be found. Wade hopes to establish the shortest London-to-Tokyo route.

The Byrd expedition, backed in part by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Edsel Ford, also seeks this unknown land.

French Expedition Mystery.

Mysterious motor sledges will play a part in the expedition under the auspices of the French navy department. The sledges are the design of Capt. Otto Svendrup, Norwegian seaman who piloted Nansen in the Fram on his famous drift past the North pole locked in polar ice. Hydroplanes also will be used.

A Norwegian, Lieutenant Ellassen, hopes to reach the pole in a flying boat, starting from Nova Zembla.

An expedition headed by Harrison Williams, backed by the American Museum of Natural History, and George Palmer Putnam, publisher, will cruise the seas about Greenland to obtain scientific data.

A party from the University of Michigan, led by Prof. William H. Hobbs, will explore Greenland itself.

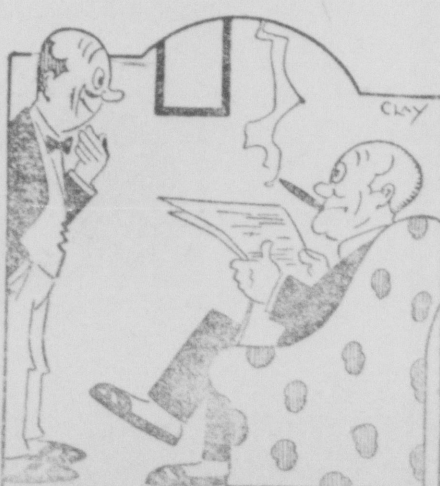

A Russian expedition to the west shore of Nova Zembla, led by Professor Matkovitch, has been announced. Another Russian expedition will explore a large island north of Siberia, formerly known as Nicholas II land, but now known as Lenin land.

Question of the Moment

"And what?" asked the prospective father-in-law, "do you expect to do for my daughter in the future?"
"I hadn't thought much about it," answered the equally prospective son-in-law. "You see, tomorrow's her birthday and I'm worrying now about her present."

Even

Girl (slipping on new engagement ring)—You've hit on my favorite stone, old thing, which is more than the others did.
Man—It's the same kind I usually buy.

WHY THEY DIG

"Why are these congressional committee always digging into something, and stirring up the dirt?"
"Because it's pay dirt, my boy."

Try It! Says a Texan

In the old days in Texas, where men wore boots and frequently died in them, we recall that the epithet was always followed by the epitaph. It was not so long ago that we met an old friend who used to "ride the peraries" with us, now engaged in the mollycoddish business of a stock broker, and he said: "Texas has become so d—n soft that if you were to spit in a man's face the chances are about even that instead of reaching for his Colt .45 he would ask you to lend him your handkerchief because the tobacco juice was hurting his eyes."—J. AMUSEMENTS

A large audience came, saw and was conquered when "Romola," Lillian Gish's latest picture, opened at the Met theater yesterday for a run of three days. This production, directed by Henry King, is a film version of the famous novel by George Eliot. It is undoubtedly one of the outstanding achievements of an outstanding year in motion picture advancement. For beauty, drama and thrills it stands at the top.

Lillian Gish, as ever, is superb in the title role, and the picture has an added attraction in Dorothy Gish, who is seen with her sister for the first time since "Orphans of the Storm." Ronald Colman, of "The White Sister" fame, is the hero, and William H. Powell is the villain. Others in the cast include Charles Lane, Herbert Grimwood, and Amelia Summerville. "Romola" was filmed in Florence, Italy, the locale of the story and this authenticity is very apparent. It is an Inspiration picture, Charles D. Duell, Jr., president; distributed by Metro-Goldwyn.

Small Courtesies Count

In all the affairs of human life, social as well as political, I have remarked that courtesies of a small and trivial character are the ones that strike deepest to the grateful and appreciating heart.—Henry Clay.

Doctor Braves Rough Sea to Treat Sailor

New York.—Storms that have been bringing out tragedy and bravery on the Atlantic marooned a surgeon from the liner Berlin on the freighter Hanover. The story was told when the Berlin docked in Hoboken.

When the storm was at its worst a seaman on the freighter suffered a fractured skull when he was struck on the head with a steel hoisting block. The Hanover was without a doctor, so a call was sent to Captain Rehm of the Berlin, which was on the horizon.

The Hanover slowed down to let the Berlin come alongside. The seaman's injury was so serious that Doctor Krueger, assistant surgeon, volunteered to go over the heavy combbers to the man. A lifeboat crew took Doctor Krueger to the Hanover. It was stiff going, with the wind high and laden with snow.

When Doctor Krueger had attended the man the seas had grown still rougher, so Captain Rehm sent word for the doctor and the lifeboat crew to remain aboard the Hanover.

WOMAN'S GENIUS SOLVES ORE TREATMENT PROBLEM

Millions Saved, but Originator of Idea Has Passed Into Practical Obscurity.

Denver, Colo.—From a woman's hatred for dirt has developed the oil selective flotation process which has made the treatment of complex and low-grade ores a success. Millions of dollars have been made and saved by the method, although its originator, Carrie Everson, has passed into practical obscurity.

J. J. Clark, majority owner in the big Kittimac mine at Silverton, Colo., tells how she stumbled onto the idea, and other Denver mining men vouch for his story.

"One day in 1897," Clark says, "Miss Everson was in her brother's assay office in Denver and saw a pile of dirty ore sacks, which her woman's instinct for cleanliness impelled her to tackle. She doused them in a pail of sudsy water and swished them around until a scum appeared on the surface of the water—a scum which, to her eyes, appeared to contain mineral values, although at the time she could not conceive of metals floating.

"She removed the scum, poured out the sudsy water and found at the bottom of the pail a sludge which she knew to be only waste rock particles. The mineral values were floated to the top while the rock sank.

"Her brother analyzed the scum and determined that lead and zinc values had ridden to the surface on the grease bubbles of the soap, just as in the modern flotation process they rise to the surface on tiny rafts of oil.

"The brother took up the idea and started to develop it in a small way, trying to interest many prominent mining men. In a short while many scientific investigators were at work on the same thing, but it was several years before the oil flotation method became any more than a secondary method for separating ores.

"The idea never died out, however, and ten years ago metallurgists in Australia made a great step by floating silver, lead and zinc separately in different oils. The war halted perfection of the process, and it was not until 1920 that both Australian and American metallurgists made real progress and developed the method to a practical position. Now it is used almost throughout the world, and has made paying projects out of workings hitherto unprofitable."

Reportorial Erudition

At an afternoon affair not so long ago, Mrs. Jesse I. Conklin said to a friend who admired her gown: "The first time I wore this dress the society reporter sent to write up the party came to me with, 'Let me see your dress is embroidered net over—over—well, what is it over?'"

"Over me," I answered.

"Nothing more was said, but the reporter understood me all right. When the description of the gown appeared it read: 'Embroidered net over flesh.'"

REVIVAL OF RELIGION IS MOST NEEDED

Blind Preacher Makes Very Strong Appeal at Calvary Evangelical Church.

Evangelistic services are now going on at Calvary Evangelical church. The blind violinist, pianist and singer, preaches every evening. Everybody welcome. Come early to get a seat.

The great need and the glorious possibilities of a revival. What is a revival? "O, Lord, Revive Thy Work." Many times people seem to be afraid of a revival meeting and some people seem to be very nervous. A real genuine touch from heaven is the greatest nerve tonic and nothing is as soothing as a Divine touch from heaven. People go about crying and whining and complaining but get salvation and you will straighten up. Then you need not be afraid of an old-fashioned revival.

Springtime is nature's revival season and we expect things to revive. Business needs to be revived. Something must take place to awaken business. The business people begin to have dollar days, selling two things for the price of one, in order that things might be revived. Should God's people be any less interested in being revived as the church is the greatest institution that ever came into existence.

It is God's work that must be revived. Belonging to church and being quite faithful to the church does not give proof that we are engaged in the work of the Lord. The question is are we saved. Are we conscious that we are now saved. Is God's spirit bearing witness with our spirit that we are a child of God?

If we are a child of God, we belong to church and we will be willing to take our share of the burden, we will say, Lord, here am I. I want to be something you can depend upon. Zealous work in the church does not give proof we are a child of God and sadly failed to be in work for God.

You can kneel seventy-seven times a month before the sacraments and partake of them, but on your way to hell.

We need more than these things. What we need in Circleville and all the United States is a revival of old Apostolic faith in God's word. Being made free from sin, we have our fruit for holiness and everlasting life.

Brother, let us accept the word of God and be willing to develop by his safe teachings of God's word. We need a revival of faith in the ministry. There are some men that really know and feel that they are there as messengers of God and to present the message the best he can.

We need a revival in old-fashion prayer. We must get our heart into the thing. There are those who really know how to hold on to God and split the skies and bring down the power from heaven.

We need a revival in faith in God. It has been said that they expect to find the bones of Jesus sometime in excavation. This shows that there are men that do not believe that Jesus lives. Too many people pray and never expect their prayers to be answered. What is the besetting sin? The besetting sin is unbelief.

DECRIES ALL FEAR OF ATHLETIC HEART

College students need no longer fear that four years of hard football or track work will leave them with a shaky "athletic heart" in middle age. Experiments by Dr. Burgess Gordon of the Boston Peter Bent Brigham hospital on men and animals revealed that the heart, instead of enlarging after strenuous exercise, actually shrinks. Furthermore, no enlargement of the heart resulted after prolonged athletic training.

Doctor Gordon made his observations on Boston marathon runners, and rabbits with normal and abnormal hearts. The rabbits were exercised to exhaustion, and X-ray pictures taken immediately afterward revealed a shrinkage which took time to disappear. The strained hearts of marathon runners also got smaller, Doctor Gordon said, and did not return to normal for several hours.

Athletes were studied to note any permanent enlargement of the heart which could be blamed on the exercise, but it was found that the most prolonged vigorous efforts did not produce the much dreaded hypertrophy of the heart.

Jug makers are very numerous in the tropics, especially the insects belonging to the family Eumenidae, says Nature Magazine. The jugs may be made of clay or vegetable material, and are often of great beauty.

Seeing and Believing

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright.)

THERE was only one fault with Helen Chapman—she was inclined to be jealous. Well, why shouldn't she be with such a paragon as Arthur Waite in her keeping? To tell the truth Arthur needed very little watching, for he was very much in love. So Arthur and Helen got along swimmingly together; the engagement ring sparkled on Helen's pretty little hand and the wedding day was fixed. Then out of a clear and sunlit sky came a simoon, a typhoon, a tornado, a hurricane which played havoc and mixed things up.

Helen and Arthur lived in a town of about ten or twelve thousand inhabitants and "on the hill," of course—where all the "best people" lived. One day, as Helen alighted from a train at the station—she had been away on a visit to some friends for a couple of weeks—she saw Arthur putting two women on board that same train.

One of the women was tall, spare and angular, dressed in black and had an air of "prunes and prisms." The other was a dainty little creature, apparently about thirty, well-dressed, red-checked, blond-haired and sprightly. Arthur assisted the elder lady on board and then, turning to the younger one, took her glowing cheeks in both his hands and kissed her affectionately on the lips before he lifted her bodily onto the steps of the car.

Helen had seen enough, and more than enough. Her runabout was waiting and she got in. How could she have been foolish enough to have left Arthur for two whole weeks unprotected? She might have known what would happen. But who was that brazen creature whom Arthur had so shamelessly kissed? Some old "flame" of his, doubtless, who had, somehow, learned of his unprotected state and had come on to cast again her siren charms around him.

That evening Arthur, the faithless, called at the Chapman residence. He came in all buoyancy, life and ardor to welcome Helen home; but stood stock still before the rigid form and the frigid face which confronted him. "Why, what's the matter?" he gasped. "Sit down," said Helen, waving her hand toward a chair. "As I got off the train this morning," she went on in measured tones, "I saw you putting two women on board. Who were they?"

"You saw me?" cried Arthur, brightening up, "why didn't you sing out? I didn't see you. That was Aunt Nancy—my rich old-maid aunt I have been telling you about—the one who is going to set us up housekeeping when we get married. She was on her way to Bar Harbor and just stopped off here to say 'how do do' to me. She was awfully sorry not to meet you."

"How old is your aunt?" asked Helen with a judicial air.

"Aunt Nancy?" replied Arthur. "Let's see—she's fifty, I should say."

"She looks sixty," said Helen.

"No," meditated Arthur, "I don't think she is—she may be getting close to it, though—anyway she is over fifty. But for heaven's sake don't ever tell her she looks it, or goodbye to all our expectations from Aunt Nancy."

Helen looked him straight in the eyes. "Who was the other woman?" she fired the question at him like a shot.

Arthur never could stand that soul-searching look of Helen's—it made him feel guilty whether he was or not—it made him nervous. His eyes sought the ceiling as he replied with a weak little laugh: "Oh, that was Miss Rathbun, Aunt Nancy's companion. Aunt Nancy thinks the world of her and has her down in her will for a nice little legacy."

"I see," said Helen. "I also saw, I saw you kissing and hugging Miss Rathbun in public this very morning at the station. Here is your ring, sir, good evening." She drew the engagement ring from her finger, placed it on the table and swept from the room. Arthur sat for a minute gazing blankly after her. Then he took his hat and wandered out into the night.

Three days later Helen was informed by the maid that "a lady" who wished to see her was in the drawing room. Helen went down—and there stood that brazen creature whom she had last seen exchanging kisses with Arthur on the station platform! "Oh, you are Helen!" cried the lively lady; "and you are just a dear. Arthur wrote me all about it and I came right on." She had her arms around Helen now and was kissing her.

"Miss Rathbun!" cried Helen struggling in the embrace.

"Why, bless you," laughed the lady; "I am not Miss Rathbun—I'm Aunt Nancy, and I'm fifty-five years old. You wouldn't think it, now, to look at me, would you? It's all in the makeup, my dear. I was so tickled when Arthur wrote me that you were jealous of me that I sent him a check for five hundred dollars and brought you a bracelet—it's somewhere in my bag here. I have tried all the beauty parlors and all the beauty doctors in the country and now I am convinced I have got hold of the right one at last. Now, my dear, let me give you a piece of advice: Don't take any stock in the saying 'Seeing is believing' again 'Tisn't so in these days."

Ten minutes later Arthur came stumbling in with a grimace on his face—the brute! And Helen was too crushed and humiliated to resent it.

CHIROPRACTOR
PAL OF KATHE
IS SENTENCED

Owens Asks Court To Be Lenient on Grounds He Was Made the "Goat"—Seeking Ring Leaders.

Claiming that he had been made the "goat" by Felix J. Kathe of this city who has just started a two-year sentence in the "pen" for auto stealing, Dr. David Owens, Portsmouth chiropractor, formerly of this city, today in the Franklin county common pleas court was given an indeterminate sentence in the State reformatory on the same charge. The plea that Owens had been made the "goat" by Kathe was advanced by Owens' attorney, Judge A. Z. Blair, of Portsmouth, who asked for a suspended sentence on this ground.

In overruling the plea, Common Pleas Judge Sowers said he had never imposed a suspended sentence for auto theft. He said, however, that he was willing to aid in obtaining a parole for Owens after the latter has served part of his sentence.

The automobile in question was stolen from Ralph Kirsch, of Columbus, last August. Kathe and Owens subsequently were arrested and Kathe is now serving his sentence in the penitentiary.

In connection with wholesale thefts of machines in and about Portsmouth, it was learned today that George F. Ruder, Columbus detective, Federal Officer Bolan and H. A. Nef, an insurance official, were in the River City during the last few days rounding up cars that have been stolen in that vicinity.

To date they have found four stolen cars at Buena Vista and Rome and one in South Portsmouth.

The officers say that they have a line on from fifteen to twenty stolen cars in Vanceburg and that vicinity and will recover them within the next few days. All of the cars have been stolen in and near Portsmouth the officers stated.

Speaking of arrests that are to be made, one of the officers said that if an arrest or two is made a real automobile ring of thieves will be uncovered.

"We have every reason to believe one exists in this section and has been doing a splendid business," one of the officers stated. — Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

WARRANTS
FOR DOCTORS

Forty-two Face Charges of Violating Prohibition Law in New York Cleanup.

New York, March 29.—Issuance of warrants for 15 more physicians and two alleged agents brought the total number of doctors, druggists and agents of distilleries charged with violation of the prohibition law through "bootleg prescriptions" to 56, including 42 doctors.

The federal grand jury is expected shortly to file indictments against many other individuals. It has been estimated that 100 physicians are involved in the illegal sale of prescription books to druggists or distillery agents.

Nearly as many druggists and agents are also said to face the possibility of indictment.

Early Theatrical "Show"
According to the proceedings of the Washington Academy of Sciences, the first theatrical performance in Washington of which there is any record was held in 1801 in Blodgett's unfinished hotel, near the site of the former Post-Office department, at Seventh and F streets. Rough boards were put in as temporary seats for the audience.

BONE MEAL, SALT
AND LIME BIG

Bone meal is one of the essential parts of the ration for chickens. Extensive investigations in feeding chickens recently made by D. C. Kennard at the Ohio Experiment Station, have shown that bone meal is one of the "big three" minerals in a balanced feed for chickens. The other two are oyster shells or high grade limestone and salt.

Bone meal is added to the mash at the rate of 2 to 4 per cent, the oyster shells or limestone is kept before the birds in hoppers or on the ground, and the salt is mixed with the mash at the rate of one-half to one pound to one hundred pounds of mash.

There are different kinds of bone meal, Mr. Kennard explains. Poultry bone meal, which is usually the "raw" bone meal and of granulated medium, or chick size, is the preferable kind.

The so-called raw bone meal is a misnomer as the product is cooked and sterilized. It should not be confused with green bone which is really raw or uncooked.

High grade special or odorless steamed bone meal may be used, but as a rule the fertilizer steamed bone meal is not suitable for feeding to poultry.

In case the poultry "raw" bone meal is not carried in stock by local dealers it can easily be procured on special order.

BETTER FATHER,
BETTER SON

The father of a man who is under sentence of death in England, writes to him from Ceylon, where he is an exile: "My sins seem to have been visited on your head, and I pray that you will forgive me before you die. If I had been a better father this might not have happened, and I am filled with terrible regret for the past."

Many a moral is being pointed from this pathetic and tragic letter, but it seems to have been overlooked, that if there is anything in heredity, then logically, the writer might excuse himself and blame his own ancestors.

There is reason to believe that one may inherit a tendency to vice and even to crime. Our duty is to make an environment superior to the pull of this abnormality and, above all, to seek inward regeneration. Correct habit based on high principles is probably man's best defense against evil ancestors, and his best line of communication with the good ones. The road to Hades may indeed be paved with good intentions, and it is equally true that the best road the other way is paved with good habits. —

The Chinese go the whole way in moral responsibility. The man who disgraces himself disgraces his ancestry, and any responsibility incurred passes on to all the succeeding generations of his descendants. — Atlanta Journal.

Novels Losing Popularity
There is a reaction against the modern novel and novel reading, according to one of Detroit's librarians. People who used to look only for the latest best seller now ask for Seventeenth and Eighteenth century classics. They are delving in books of travel and biography and even political economy. They come to the library more frequently, too, for this more serious reading, she says. — Detroit News.

Duty's Call
Every mission constitutes a pledge of duty: Every man is bound to consecrate his every faculty to its fulfillment. He will derive his rule of action from the profound conviction of that duty. — Mazzini.

Hope in the Future
"You've no idea 'ow hard it is lookin' for work, Mrs. Harris. I shall be quite glad when I get a job so as I can 'ave a thorough rest." — London Opinion.

Antlers of Deer
Deer antlers are shed each year, usually soon after the close of the breeding season, to be renewed the following spring. Sometimes antlers are straight and unbranched, but usually there are branches, called tines or snags, and the number of these increases with age, so that the finest antlers are on fully matured males.

The Best Things
Whatever is best is safest; lies out of the reach of human power; can neither be given nor taken away. — Bollingbroke.

Master Sculptor
Myron, the celebrated Greek sculptor, who lived in the Fifth century, B. C., was noted for the action of his statues, mainly of athletes. He showed them as actually engaged in contest rather than merely posing.

WHAT IS SPENT

On Golf Each Year Would Pay Interest on War Debts.

Billiards, an indoor game, rivals golf in number of players, and basket ball is rapidly approaching golf numerically, it is reported in an article in this week's Liberty. But for actual players, for expense and importance (to the players), golf is the big game.

"Attempts have been made," it is explained, "to estimate the amount of money expended on golf and no accurate estimate can be reached. But the figures show that enough is spent on golf each year to pay interest on all war debts.

"The United States Golf Association experts estimate that there are now about 4,780 organized golf clubs in America. A survey of the field shows that approximately 1,422,014 acres are used for golf. This would make a state almost as large as Delaware.

"There are, according to estimates, 2,150,000 golfers, of whom 1,115,000 are classed as regulars and members of recognized clubs.

"On the 4,780 golf courses and links there are 81,180 holes, this being figured on the number of eighteen-hole and nine-hole courses in the country.

"The average yardage of these holes, if placed end to end, would cover 17,824 miles, so a golfer could tee off in New York and play around the world as far as Meshed, Persia, if he drove westward.

"The number of golf balls used in the United States each season is now estimated at sixty-two million, including the remades."

Switch Was Psychological

It is estimated there were only one-fifth as many books on child psychology when older switches grew in every back yard.—Detroit News.

BOWLING DISCS

Used Centuries Ago By Hawaiian Bobsles Unearthed.

Honolulu, H. T., March 29.—A number of discs of polished lava used by Hawaiian nobles centuries ago in a bowling game known as mai-ka, have been discovered by excavators at work on the site of the royal palace and palm grove of Hawaii's kings where the Royal Hawaiian Hotel is now under construction.

The discs are about two and a half inches in diameter and an inch and a quarter thick. The object of the game, according to David Malo, an authority on Hawaiian customs, was two-fold—to roll the discs between certain stakes set on the earthen course, and at the same time outdo the other contestants in the distance rolled.

Up until a quarter of a century ago some of the mai-ka courses, worn smooth by centuries of use, were still plainly visible at various localities in the islands.

FATHER WILL PRACTICE LAW

In Court Presided Over By His Son, Judge Carl V. Weygandt.

Cleveland, March 29.—(UP.)—Common Pleas Judge Carl V. Weygandt obtained his boyhood ambition today. He came back today to his old home town of Wooster and sat on the common pleas bench there as a judge.

Before his bar will appear all his old schoolmates and in addition his father, William E. Weygandt, who is also an attorney, will probably have to plead cases before his son.

Weygandt left Wooster in 1913 to attend Western Reserve University Law School and then practiced law in Cleveland before he was made a judge here. It is his first official visit to Wooster.

MAN EVER WAGING FIGHT ON DISEASE

Happy legends to the contrary, there seems no reason to believe that the world ever has known a golden age of health. Geologists find diseased bones which are thought to show that even great prehistoric lizards, and after them the early mammals, suffered from tumors which, according to the advertisers, will claim the teeth of four out of five of us. Man probably falls heir to troubles which other flesh suffered before him.

By herding in crowds, by giving up his dower rights of sunlight and space, he even has added to many of those troubles, has created wholly new ways of wracking body and mind. For a time the balance of life and death promised doom to cities; they survived only because life was produced abundantly and cheaply without their walls, and the best and most adventurous were fed into them. The slow process of observation and control which has made it safer now to live in a big city than in a village (and often safer to live in a city than in the open country itself), is the science of public health.—Survey Graphic.

The Modern Gait

President Frank H. Alfred of the Pere Marquette line was talking, at a luncheon in Detroit, about the steel-trussed concrete roadways whereon he expects Pere Marquette trains to travel in the future almost with the speed of airplanes.

"We mustn't lag behind. Everything, you know, has speeded up amazingly," Mr. Alfred ended with a smile. "Why, it used to take a young man longer to lay his heart at a girl's feet than it takes the young man of today to be introduced, fall in love, promise, marry, run off with some one else, get divorced and undergo a prison term for nonpayment of alimony."

New Spanish Feast

Among the devices the dictatorship in Spain is devising to promote culture and rouse the nation is a new festival, the feast of the book. It will be held every year on October 7, the birthday of Cervantes. On that day in all official centers in Spain, at military and naval masses, in public and in private, the day will be honored by free distribution of books by the government and the municipalities. On books purchased October 7, booksellers will have to allow a handsome discount.

x HARTMAN THEATER. x x
x x x x x x x x

George Arliss, leading actor of the English speaking stage, returns to the Hartman theater, Columbus, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, March 29, 30 and 31, with Wednesday matinee, to appear in Winthrop Ames' production of John Galsworthy's play "Old English," which is said to give Arliss the greatest role of his career. Recalling the Arliss Disraeli, Alexander Hamilton and Rajah of Rukh in "The Green Goddess," this seems a broad statement, but certain it is that "Old English" is a different kind of a character from those associated with the name of Arliss.

Sylvanus Heythrop, called Old English but his associates, is not the usual Galsworthy hero. The English author, hitherto impartial, almost afraid, as it were, of taking sides with any of his characters, pleads the cause of an octogenarian sinner, who is about to meet the first defeat and who goes to his end magnificently. As Robert L. Stevenson put it, "gladly he lived and gladly he dies." To look for a moral in "Old English" may be to find it, but it so highly is embroidered by the author that he will be brave who shall try to reduce the drama to platitudes.

Winthrop Ames has produced "Old English." Ames staged "Strife" and "The Pigeon" in America. He has brought out many notable plays. It would seem that in Ames Galsworthy meets a producer entirely in sympathy with his work. The cast includes all the players who impressed New York during the two hundred nights "Old English" was acted there, Irby Marshall is leading woman for Mr. Arliss. Ivan F. Simpson will be remembered for his portrayal of Watkins, the butler, in "The Green Goddess." Others in the company are Cecile Dixon, Molly Johnson, Ethel Griffies, Henrietta Goodwin, Murray Kinnell, Robert Harrigan, Henry Morrell, Gilbert Cowan, Gordon McRae, Guy Cunningham, Perry Norman, Lewis A. Sealy, John Hall, Edward Cooper, M. Murray Stephens, John Parrish, Arthur Villars and Thomas Donnelly.
